Crocus mixed vernus

Beautiful parks that want to show off in early-Spring need to plant crocus mixed vernus flower bulbs. Every early-Spring, right after everyone awakens from the winter dip, crocuses show their faces. Crocuses appear in many different colors, for example, purple, white, yellow, blue. To make it easy, we put together the lovely Crocus mixed vernus flower bulb mix. These packages are perfect for landscaping.

Winter garden plants

Although you see crocuses often in landscaping, crocuses are also suitable for flower pots. Crocuses can either be potted indoors and outdoors. Because crocuses naturalize easily, they cover a field in only one or two years. Plant the flower bulbs in grass areas to enjoy a splash of color in early Spring. Because crocuses are hardy, they don't need any maintenance. Loads of people love the hardy crocuses.

Mixed colors

The mixed flower bulbs appear in different colors in early Spring. Depending on the number of bulbs, notice a perfect mixture of blue, white, and yellow flowers.

- Plant the bulbs about 3" (8 cm) deep.
- Keep a distance of 3" (8 cm) per bulb.
- Crocuses grow up to 4" (10 cm) and remain low.

Combine these varieties with other early bloomers like daffodils, tulips, and snowdrops for a stunning spring display.
