Tulip Apeldoorn

For unique perennials, the Apeldoorn tulips are perfect! The traditional scarlet red is combined with a fascinating transition of color in the petals. Notice how the green at the stems evolves in the deep red with a lovely shimmer. These high-stemmed tulips stand high above the ground, capturing attention as true royals of the garden. The flowers bloom best in a place in the sun or half-shade, in which they can open up when the sunlight touches them.

Great naturalizers

Tulips are perfect as naturalizer in landscaping for their resilience to weather and their outstanding colors. The Apeldoorn tulips have petals in a deep scarlet red, making them timeless flowers for every yard, field and landscape. Combine the flowers with other beautifully colored tulips or other perennials for a unique flower bed. All these flowers need is a spot in the sun or half-shade, where they can be admired by every person passing by.

Low-maintenance perennials

Not only for their great, sturdy stems are tulips favored, their resilience to different weather makes them perfect for many areas. As tulips originate from mountain climates, they are adapted to changing weather conditions, making them perfect perennials for areas with a temperate climate and moderate rainfall. The Apeldoorn tulips:

- Are Darwin Hybrid tulips, well known for their long, sturdy stems;
- Will grow up to 22 inches;
- Must be planted before the first frost, somewhere between december and september;
- Must be planted four inches in the ground and two inches apart from another;
- Bloom mid-spring;
- Make for good naturalizers, as well as cut flowers.
